

MY CHILD IS STRUGGLING IN SCHOOL, BUT I DON'T KNOW WHY...

HAVE YOU BEEN TOLD YOUR CHILD HAS ADHD, BUT THAT DOESN'T SEEM TO FULLY EXPLAIN HER PROBLEMS?

DOES IT TAKE YOUR CHILD MUCH LONGER TO COMPLETE ASSIGNMENTS THAN HIS PEERS?

DOES YOUR CHILD STRUGGLE IN READING, BUT PERFORM WELL IN MATH?

CAREFUL TESTING CAN HELP FIGURE OUT WHAT'S GOING ON AND PROVIDE REALISTIC SOLUTIONS TAILORED TO YOUR CHILD!

Psychology Resources welcomes John's Hopkins/Kennedy Krieger Institute trained pediatric neuropsychologist, Dr. Baruch Williams. She is currently offering comprehensive neuropsychological evaluations, psychoeducational evaluations, ADHD evaluations, and Gifted/Talented evaluations. Comprehensive neuropsychological evaluations include assessment of a variety of skills, including:

- Intelligence (IQ)
- Academic Achievement
- Language Skills
- Attention
- Executive Functioning
- Short- and Long-Term Memory
- Fine Motor Skills
- Social/Emotional/Behavioral Functioning
- Adaptive Skills (life skills for taking care of oneself & getting along with others)

Children/adolescents/young adults who are having difficulties with learning and overall functioning may benefit from a neuropsychological evaluation. In addition, individuals with neurological/medical diagnoses or general developmental concerns would benefit from a neuropsychological evaluation, including the following:

- Epilepsy/Seizures
- Traumatic Brain Injury/Concussion
- Prematurity
- Prenatal Substance Exposure
- Genetic/Congenital Disorders
- Cerebral Palsy
- Brain Tumor/Childhood Cancer
- Learning Disability
- Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)
